Linda Nieves-Powell is a professional writer and a member of the Writers Guild East, whose fiction and non-fiction work has been published by Atria/Simon & Schuster, Akashic Books, Latina and Estylo Magazines. In 2013/2014 Linda was commissioned to write the Nueva Latina monologues, a stage play for Orgullosa, a Procter and Gamble social media brand that creates empowering content for the Latina community.

The Nueva Latina monologues was a featured performance at LULAC and Hispanicize. Her award-winning play YO SOY LATINA! has performed at over 400 colleges in the U.S., off-Broadway, and at the Tony-award winning theater company Crossroads .

Her full-length screenplay "Six of Me", was a semi-finalist at the 2013 Sundance Screenwriting Lab. Linda is also a photographer who created the Latina Icons photo tribute project and a filmmaker with several notable festival credits.

Manuel Gómez Crespo, is a Puerto Rican sculptor, based in Brooklyn, New York. He has an MFA on sculpture from Pratt Institute in 2015. Since then, he is part of a creative group in a private company call Ath Studios based in Industry City (South Brooklyn) where he has been an artisan for artists, designers and architects.

Manuel specializes in steel; however, the work he does is mixed media. He is a sculptor with restless spirit, something galactic, a mathematician, physicist and futurist. His themes or concepts are encapsulated within science fiction, the Cosmos, with a magnet and balance for the interior design and functional elements within the same art concept.

With his artist's pulse and the advantage of being a professional welder/fabricator as, his highest ambition is to create monumental works that awakens new dimensions or reinvents the relationship between space and time.
